JOAN'S JOTTINGS

I just came back from a trip where I visited with family and friends. I had a wonderful time, but it also made me think about the nature of friendships.

I first went to the Jane Austen conference with my cousin Janet and then went to her house for a few days. Janet and I grew up together. Our mothers were sisters and best friends, so we did EVERYTHING together. We were closer than to our siblings, but through the years lost touch. Thanks to Covid and a weekly Zoom call we reconnected. We are each other's "living memory."

My Sister Susan was the next stop. She is 17 years younger than I am. We are family and love each other but can never really be friends.

My last stop was with Lorraine. We worked together when we were 25 and just clicked. We only lived close to each other for 2 ½ years and visited sporadically throughout the next 55+ years, but pick up as though we just saw each other the day before. It is remarkable and a true blessing for which we both are very grateful.

This is the kind of friendship that I treasure and hope all of you have.
